Editorial policies
Any manuscript submitted to the Europasian Journal of Medical Sciences (EJMS) must be plagiarism free and not be published in any journal, or under consideration of publication in any other journal or other citable form. Authors are required to ensure that no material submitted as part of a manuscript infringes existing copyrights, or the rights of a third party.

Peer-review Process
The EJMS follows the double-blind peer-review process where the identity of author kept secret from the editor and the identity of editor kept confidential from the author; to ensure the personal bias ensuring the standard of quality requires for the article before acceptance for publication. We make every effort to reach an initial decision within two to four weeks of submission, depending on the type and clarity of research work, research methodology used, availability of reviewer etc.

All submitted manuscripts are peer reviewed to ensure editorial appropriateness and technical correctness. Every article after the successful submission, first evaluated by editor-in-chief and check the overall quality, and appropriateness of the manuscripts. If the manuscript is found appropriate then the editor-in-chief will assign an editor from the editorial board who will review the manuscript for the extent of plagiarism and give the editorial feedback within 2-3 days of the manuscript submission and sent it back to the author for the revision within one week time. The revised manuscript is then forwarded for the further peer-review process. The assigned editor will assign at least three reviewers (two national and one international) for their review and feedback. All the authors are asked to provide names and contact details of two reviewers of the related field expert; however, final selection of reviewers is the responsibility of the assigned editor for the specific manuscript submitted. Based on the review process, the editorial-board can reject, accepts or accept after revisions of the manuscript.

We make every effort to reach an initial decision within two to four weeks of submission, depending on the type and clarity of research work, research methodology used, availability of reviewer etc. The detailed editorial process and polices is summarized in the flowchart.
Peer-review Process – Flowchart (EJMS)

Manuscript Submission by Author

Initial screening by Chief Editor

Desk Rejection — beyond the scope of the journal & low quality of paper

Editorial Review by Section Editor and send for Peer review

Assessment by editorial board for content, technicality and plagiarism

Editorial feedback to authors for the correction

Rejected due to inadequate quality of the paper

Article sent for double blind peer review

Reviewer 1 & Reviewer 2

Comments from reviewer

Revised manuscript submitted by authors

Final decision by the editorial team

Accepted — if author(s) revised as per the feedback

Revision suggested

Rejected — if authors is unable to perform inadequate revision

Revised manuscript submission by authors

Article published